

Health in your Hands

Your ANNUAL REPORT
FY 2015

In the new health care landscape it is critical for patients to have quick and easy access to services. Planned Parenthood Mar Monte has met this challenge by introducing new ways for the women and families we serve to receive excellent, affordable health care on their schedules in a way that's most convenient for them. Whether it's same-day appointments or our Online Appointment Scheduling service or the new PP Direct app that allows patients to get confidential STD- testing results on their phones, PPMM has kept pace with patients who need their health care to fit into busy lives with demanding work schedules, transportation challenges and complicated child-care situations.

PPMM has continued to provide our special brand of high-quality, trusted and affordable health care to an increasing number of patients that are newly insured through the Affordable Care Act, despite severely outdated Medicaid reimbursement rates in the two states we serve. We have provided services for many new immigrant families, who remain ineligible for health coverage, including increased outreach to growing immigrant communities in parts of our service area. PPMM's award-winning education programs remain in high demand in our communities and schools, and generous support from donors has helped sustain them despite the steady erosion in public funding cuts. Though the regressive avalanche of restrictions on women's health care has continued unabated in 2015, PPMM's effective advocacy work has helped safeguard access to reproductive health care in California and Nevada.

As health care continues to change and adapt in this new era, PPMM remains steadfastly committed to serving all the patients who need us in all of our communities. We will be here to care for women, men, teens and families with excellent, affordable services they can always rely on.

No matter what.

DRIVING

In addition to flexible walk-in visits and welcoming family and teen groups in our waiting rooms, PPMM has enhanced convenience in our health centers by embracing technology that makes health care more accessible for patients. We understand that people need to be able to care for themselves and their families at a time and place that works best for them.

Change

- PPMM successfully launched Online Appointment Scheduling (OAS) available in English and Spanish for family planning patients, new or continuing. After only three months, OAS accounted for more than 10% of all appointments, and that number is on a pace to more than double by next year.
- In San Mateo and Alameda Counties, the most recent additions to PPMM's service area, we opened new health centers in Redwood City, Hayward and near the Coliseum in East Oakland. The three new centers have been enthusiastically welcomed by the communities around them.
- The Watsonville and North Stockton health centers implemented a new workflow redesign initiative. This system of streamlining processes at health centers has a dramatic positive effect on the patient experience as well as staff satisfaction, and the initiative will expand to more health centers next year.
- PPMM launched the innovative mobile app, PP Direct, developed in association with Planned Parenthood Affiliates of California and Planned Parenthood Federation of America, which enables patients to test at home for the two most common and treatable sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), gonorrhea and chlamydia. Patients can receive their test results and treatment through the app, and early reviews have been very positive.
- PPMM's "patient centered medical home" services provided at the Mountain View, Blossom Hill and Watsonville health centers achieved Level II National Committee for Quality Assurance certification, reflecting our commitment to providing excellent primary care with a team of medical staff focusing on each patient's overall health care needs.

“When I came to this country eight years ago, I was in my first year of college and in my first romantic relationship. Planned Parenthood was a shoulder for me to lean on and a safe haven. They provided me with options that allowed me to graduate from college and safeguard my future. It is crucial for other women to have access to these services.”

Education & Outreach

Our educators continued to find engaging ways to inform students and community members about reproductive health in the face of dwindling public funding for education. PPMM programs have had a significant impact on stemming the spread of STDs, reducing the number of unintended pregnancies in California and Nevada counties and providing access to crucial health information for residents in remote, rural areas.

- Behavioral Health Services, first launched at the Westside and Watsonville health centers, began a new program at the Redwood City health center that focuses on fostering the bonding relationship between parent and child. The program, “Creciendo Juntos” (Growing Together) provides counseling and support for parents of young children, and a weekly support group is conducted in Spanish.
- PPMM educators in the Central Valley launched a series of sexuality education sessions for developmentally delayed adults, focusing on life skills and relationships. Since the sessions began, there has been an increasing demand for them in our service area.
- Kids in Common, a PPMM program in Santa Clara County, made further strides in its mission to advocate for policies, partnerships and investments that improve children’s lives. It was one of only seven sites in the country chosen to spearhead new programming funded by the federal Social Innovation Fund. KIC coordinates the Opportunity Youth Partnership, which is managing a county-wide effort to connect youth with academic support and help them progress to post-secondary education.
- The Promotoras program for Spanish-speakers, ages 18-30, reached out to nearly 1,000 women in Stanislaus, San Joaquin and Monterey Counties. Teams of PPMM staff led trained volunteers who provided information to residents that have very limited access to health services about the importance of preventive care, including STD-testing and family planning.
- PPMM is participating in Monterey County’s “Text for Salud” pilot outreach to Pajaro Valley farm workers who receive texts in Spanish about health issues, such as how to minimize exposure to pesticides.
- All 27 participants in PPMM’s Teen Talk program for at-risk middle school students have remained enrolled in school and avoided a first pregnancy. More than 90% have maintained at least a 2.0 grade average. More than 20% have maintained a 4.0 grade average while in the program.
- Teen Success, PPMM’s award-winning support program for pregnant and parenting teens, joined a project launched by the Fresno chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union to advocate on behalf of school-age mothers in Fresno Unified School District. Ten members of PPMM’s local Teen Success group are participating.

"Thank you for presenting to my Adult Transition Program students. I love the way [PPMM is] able to present information in a way that our students can understand. In so many ways, the information that you give our students could be considered life-saving with relationships, self-confidence and physical health. I hear about it throughout the year when the students tell me something [PPMM] taught them, or they ask when you will come again because they have a question for you."

In a year that included U.S. Supreme Court rulings allowing certain employers to deny contraception coverage to female employees and anti-abortion-rights protesters to cross previously protected "buffer zones" around women's health clinics, PPMM bucked the national trend by fighting successfully for legislation that protected access to reproductive health care. PPMM staff effectively lobbied legislators and recruited new volunteers and community partners to promote reproductive justice for the women and families we serve.

- In California, PPMM helped to win the passage of a bill and a resolution protecting reproductive rights. SB 1053 ensured that women have access to a full range of contraceptives without cost-sharing or denial of coverage. SR 55 affirmed the rights of women to control their reproductive health care in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that allowed some employers to deny coverage of contraceptives.
- In Nevada, PPMM rallied supporters to contact their legislators and reject a proposed bill that would have threatened the safety of the most vulnerable teenagers by requiring girls under the age of 18 to notify their parents before having an abortion.
- PPMM worked tirelessly with colleagues from other states to help defeat dangerous “personhood” constitutional amendments in Colorado and North Dakota that would have severely restricted reproductive rights and health care.
- Four young women sponsored by PPMM – two from California and two from Nevada – were accepted to PPFA’s Generation Action Fellowship program and will work with PPMM staff to engage students on their college campuses to actively support reproductive justice issues.
- PPMM produced a short video featuring patients who told their stories of what our services have meant to them. The video has been viewed thousands of times on YouTube from PPMM’s Facebook page, and it has been an effective advocacy tool with our community partners, especially in the Central Valley.

“We need
PEOPLE
FIGHT FOR Women’s RIGHTS”

“Through volunteering, I’ve learned about all the other things that Planned Parenthood does. There’s a lot of outreach to the community to get people to vote and volunteer ... We need people who are willing to fight for women’s rights across the country and within Nevada, as well. That’s why I’ve committed to be part of the Generation Action fellowship and work to increase support and engagement among youth and communities of color for Planned Parenthood for the next two years.”
